Hi Sabrina,

How are you doing? Are you interested in this:

A "Rising Stars in Physics" career workshop for talented early career women (for last year grads and postdocs).

The committee is seeking your input about potential candidates for the workshop. The workshop is partly intended to be a recruitment event for potential MIT physics women faculty, so if you are aware of any outstanding young woman at that career stage, I'd appreciate you letting me know. Please send me name, career stage, affiliation/advisor and, if possible, email. One possibility is that you think about recent Pappalardo nominees who weren't selected or didn't join the program. If they have continued to do well during their postdoc, we want them to visit! Once we have all the nominations, we are aiming at inviting ~20/25 women from all areas of physics/astronomy, with strong preference for domestic candidates, but exceptionally strong international candidates may be invited too. The event will be a two day workshop, held Oct 19-20, with a program consisting of talks and career advice panels, and we'll be asking some of you to participate in some of the latter.
